Employers and unions agree: labor reform is not sufficient to solve the problems of logistics sector.

Logistics sector employers, unions and legal experts have all agreed that the Labor Reform is insufficient and contradictory in its implementation, to solve the serious and complex problems affecting the sector. Thus, both share when it comes to betting on the establishment of a general agreement and specific to the field of logistics operators, separate from the road transportation as currently implemented, "as the key to progress in solving socio-occupational problems."
