«Madrid already has another port».

On November 30th the port of Castellon submitted to the Madrid Chamber of Commerce its renewed offer of services following the expansion works that have been carried out in the last five years. In the event, the president of the Castellon Port Authority, Juan José Monzonís, said that "Madrid already has another port." Monzonís emphasized the four million square meters available for logistics activities with which the Castellon harbour aims to become a third generation port where operators can incorporate added value to the port activities.
