The logistics sector is committed to sustainability as a key tool to be competitive

The environmental Politics and the strategies of sustainability of companies that give life to the logistics sector are now more than ever a competitive weapon. This was reflected yesterday in the 33rd CEL Logistics Journeys, which deepened in the keys of excellence in the new global frame. The sector begins to confront the sustainability as something more than a policy of engagement with the environment. The work already carried out focused on a more sustainable logistics confirms that the transportation and logistics are in this kind of strategy a weapon with a much higher competitiveness capacity in the global economy.
